

At the time the Maya codices were painted, a number of cities and towns were occupied throughout the Maya area. The codices are believed to have come from the northern part of this region (the Yucatan peninsula). Some of the cities that date to the Late Postclassic period include Mayapan (left) and Tulum (right).

